The SAFFRON FINCH (Sycalis flaveola) is the only representative of its genus well known in this country. It is very canary-like, greenish-yellow above, streaked with blackish. The forehead is bright orange and the underparts are yellow. The female is somewhat duller than the male, but otherwise is similar. The Saffron Finch is now being imported from northern South America in some numbers. It is very easily kept, and breeds readily in an aviary. It is not a safe companion, however, for species smaller than itself. The GRASSQUITs (Tiaris) are tiny birds, found chiefly, though not exclusively, in the West Indies. The most familiar species is the MELODIUS GRASSQUIT (T. canora), of Cuba, known in England as the Cuban Finch, and among American dealers by the native name Tomogina. The male is green above, with the head, throat...
